

Side Notes:

- Sometimes when I see my little girl twirling in the leaves or playing dress-up in the mirror, I realize that she won't be little for very long. Before I know it I'll be watching her shine in a performance; listening to her give the graduation speech; or seeing her look so beautiful as she gets ready for a special date. In those moments I'm sure I'll wonder where the time went. With amazement, I'll think to myself, "That's my little girl!"

I think the first seven measures of this song are seven of the finest measures I've ever written. (Actually, I stole them from a Bach piece: Prelude in C)

Helpful Hints:

- If you find yourself forced to choose between playing this song real slow or playing it with a lot of pauses, definitely pick playing this song real slow.

Prelude

(My Little Girl)

$\text{♩} = 56-62$

With a very flowing feeling

copyright ©2001

written by Jon Schmidt

(from the album To The Summit)

1

mp

One way to overcome double bass clef paranoia is to play the top clef with the left hand at first, thus convincing the brain that it can play those notes. Then, without letting the brain know, sneak the right hand back into the picture.

Pedal ad-lib, except where noted

3

5

6

rit.

a tempo

This song flows kind of nice with a subtle accent on beat 1 and 3: | | | etc.

The score consists of three systems of piano music. The first system (measures 1-2) is in a double bass clef with a mezzo-piano (mp) dynamic. The second system (measures 3-5) continues in the double bass clef, with measure 5 marked with a '5'. The third system (measures 6-8) starts with a treble clef and a rit. (ritardando) marking, then returns to a double bass clef with an a tempo marking. A note about phrasing is provided for measures 6-8.