Etude I.

Fingering, Phrasing and Annotations by
G. BUONAMICI.

H. BERTINI. Op. 100.

Allegretto. ($ \dot{T} = 116.$)

Piano.

Before playing this study and the subsequent ones with the shadings and in the movements indicated, play them slowly and always loud, giving a special prominence to the accented notes of the measure, and even, if need be, to the unaccented ones.

This exercise should accordingly be practiced thus:

The comma(s), found in the 40th measure, and which will be found in other places in the course of these Studies, indicates a raising of the hand as much as is necessary for separating clearly one phrase from another, like the sign by which teachers of singing point out when breath must be taken.

At first, the hands should be practiced separately, and a special study should be made of those measures, of those passages, or details, which offer some difficulty, whether in the right or the left hand.

The use of the Metronome is strongly recommended.

These four observations are intended to apply throughout all these Studies.
