Note:

The music in this collection has been extracted from the Columbia Records album of the Dave Brubeck Quartet entitled, "Jazz Impressions of Japan". These tunes represent Dave Brubeck's personal impressions from the Quartet's tour of Japan, Spring, 1964. The splendid job of transcribing and editing these pieces for solo piano was done by Dave's brother, Howard Brubeck, a highly respected composer, arranger, and editor.

All six selections included in this volume contain Dave Brubeck's piano improvisations in their entirety. In addition, five of the six pieces contain the complete improvisations of the Quartet's masterful alto saxophonist, Paul Desmond.

In order to assist the pianist, suggested fingering has been given, and optional cuts have been provided in the event that the player wishes to avoid the more difficult improvisations.

Chord symbols have been included in order to help show the student of jazz improvisation how the accomplished jazz musician improvises within the framework of the chords on which each theme is based. Furthermore, the symbols serve as a point of reference for the player who wishes to undertake his own improvisation on these most attractive themes.
